After a long and worthwhile wait the Watercolor Society of South Africa is bringing to Kizo their highly anticipated national exhibition.

The Society is amongst a few surviving art societies left in South Africa and has over the years proven to be a much needed network for artists in general. Due to the high quality of works presented for auction at Sotheby's in JHB a couple of months ago, one can expect the same standard in the show, if not better. The medium of watercolor painting is extremely challenging and one that requires a lot of skill and patience. Because of the diverse membership base of the society we can expect a variety of works reflecting the diversity and interests of the artists belonging to the society.

We at Kizo are especially proud to be hosting this ground breaking exhibition.
